Dear Johan,

Thankyou for your FAX of 21 May. Some of the revisions, especially on page 11, take account of the possibility of non-systematic approaches. But we have not given them anything like the attention given to systematic ones. More particularly, there is no analysis of them, for example in terms of specific scenarios with reasonable numerical assumptions. Since I do feel that such analysis could be of interest and value, whatever its conclusions, I request that a note be added to the published report stating that " M. Meselson considers that analysis of non-systematic methods of Schedule II verification, utilizing specific numerical examples, would be desirable in further evaluating the utility of Schedule II inspection for verification and deterrence."

Sincerely,

Matthew Meselson
